nclivity exists in nearly every textile centre and large quantities of wool are geng into con un.prms while at 'home then its are not all west employed' The reason for this is that our mills cannot compete with foreign mills under advantages secured by the latter in the facts he sauff law adop ed by the last tongress. The condition is emphasized by the fact that 56 54 003 in foreign value of woolen manu actures alone were in ported in August and for the right months the new tariff oh those good was in effect, including August, the total importations of woolen manufactures were in value 840 749 250. For the corresponding months last year the importations were $11,728,233 and for 184) 521 (1932) In other words, the ingertak on of woolen manufactures in cial i months under the new law are citly flouble what they were in any corresponding period under the Mckin les act. The New Tariff Gaw.

S ne of the rilogical and in onsistent fustures of the new (a) ff 'say nave been summed up by the Washington correspondent of the New York Tribune showing that its effects are dian'etrically op posed to the claims made for it by its advecties. Our remarkable feature in the operations of the new law is the great reduction in importations of goods free clusty while the total importaturns have greatly increased. It was sufficied that a law framed by a party whi libad made free trade & chief featare to its platform and creed would not only materially increase the percentage of goods imported free of duty, but largely increase the total free importabeen the case

h the three full fiscal years in which the Mckinley law was in operation over 50 per cent of the goods imported came in freed duty, and during to last year the free importation formed 59 53 per tent of the total Under the new law, which was expected to add 'argely to the free h t, the free importations in its first twelve months amounted to only 484 per tent of the total. Another remarkable feature of the totals for the various years under the various laws is the fact that the importation of goods free of duty has actually fallen of under the new law Not only has the proportion of free importations been educed, but the quantity has actually been reduced as compared with any year under the Mckinley law. The average annual imports free of duty under the McKinley law in its full three years amounted to $420,090,000 a year, and in 1's last fiscal year were $378,968,717. In the first year of the new law they were or ly $367,720,while the dutiable imports, which in the last year of the McKinley law were 8257,645,743, jumped-to $391,321,497 under the new law 'Ihua the free trade tariff, comparing its operations with the Mckinley tariff, actually occreased by many millions the amount of foreign goods which the people might get free of duty, while it increased by 56 per cent, the quantity in which they, must Still another femarkable fact with reference to the workings of the new law is the increased rate of duty which it compels the public to pay on the importations. It is a curious fact that the rates of duty collected on the total imposts in its first year were a righer average for the entire amount inforted.

In the last flacal year under the McKluley law the average ad valorem rate of duty paid on all importa-tions was 20.25 per cent, and in the first's year under the new law, the average ad valorem rate of duty paid on all importations was 21,2 per cent. The Caribon Republican says: An event, Thursday last, marks an important page in the history of the State of Maine. At Riverside cemetery, Fort Fairfield, under the auspices of Cauton Wabasso, was laid with imposing ceremonles, the corner stone of a beautiful monument on which is inscribed "Erected by authority of a resolve of the Legislature of Maine A. D. 1895, to commemorate the patriotism of John Baker, ROOM PAPERS a loyal son of Maine, in maintaining the ment stations, with an income from all honor of his flag during the contentions sources of almost $1,000,000 for the year, and with 557 persons in their working staffs, not counting ordinary laborers. The major, in # strong, clear, voice recounted the story of the hardships and sufferings of the loyal John and Sophia Baker. Several years before the troubles concerning the northeastern boundary of Maine, John Buker came from Somerset county to the St. John river. He had purchased of Maine and Massachusetts some two or more miles of land along said river and proposed to start a colony and named the place Bakersville. Of course it was an almost unbroken wilderness, but a few families joined him and he made a home and built mills.

When old "Independence Day" came around Mrs. Baker herself took a log Studio, No. 4 Sc cance and went down to Grand Falls and purchased the best she could find in red, white and blue materials and with her own hands made a flag, which was raised from their rude house on Fourth of July morning. This act so incensed the provincials, a few of whom were then settled along the river, that they tore down the colors and threatened to make life miscrable for the patriots if hey persevered in floating to the breeze the reminder of American victory. despite the threats, Sophia, "his wife," assisted her husband with the aid of her broomstick in defending the dear old
